

:: blog :: ebooks + audiobooks :: resume + press :: podcast :: audio :: videoblog :: Fotki :: Flickr :: linklove ::
san francisco :: my books

•

 hot sex ed ***

:: erotica :: howto's

:: safer sex guide

:: suck :: lick :: rim

:: g-spot info

:: unsafe sex toys

:: sex ed podcast

:: my sex ed books

:: find good porn

:: safe porn surfing

:: info for couples

:: info for parents

:: sexual healing

* * * * *

:: this week's Chronicle column

* * * * *

I am gleefully sponsored by Helio

* * * * *

blog archives

* * * * *

RSS: really simple stalking

this blog * open source sex * my videos * my Fleshbot * my SF Chronicle * my Metblogs * Fotki *
Flickr * techyum * bloggers undressed

* * * * *

presents for me, if you like what you see (I haz wish lists):

Agent Provocateur

Stockroom

* * * * *

I write way too much

NEW: best women's erotica 2008

the smart girl's guide to the g-spot

the smart girl's guide to porn

the adventurous couple's guide to strap-on sex

lust: erotic fantasies for women

fetish sex: an erotic guide for couples

the ultimate guide to cunnilingus

the ultimate guide to fellatio

sweet life: erotic fantasies for couples

* * * * *

* * * * *

my sex ed ebooks and erotica, no DRM, all $10 and under, all money goes directly to authors:

on Kindle::

how to kiss *

creatures of the night \(erotica\) *

the modern safer sex guide

* * * * *

check out my personal picks for sex toys, hot erotic books, best sex advice, videos, toys for couples and singles, gender fun, sex ed for all ages, and much more...

No image available
46%
off

[Tantus Bend Over
Beginner Kit](#)
Tantus
New $52.32
Was $52.32
Privacy Information

* * * * *

techyum

:apple :art :blognews
:booze :cameras
:censorship :crime :death
:design :dorkbot :dm
:gadgets
:hacker :homeland :insecurity
:indymedia :laughing squid
:linkbat :lists :los angeles
:new york :news
:phones :photos :porn
:pranks :naa :photo :san francisco :shiny
:space :tech :techyum
:video :wups

* * * * *

sugardvd
no due dates
good pr0n

* * * * *

tasteful, respectful explicit paysites I fully support (and are personal friends):

my friends and their sex machines

my \(feminist-identitfied\) pals wrestle and the loser sexually submits

barelyevil.com
cute goth girls. yay!

eroticbpm.net
raver pr0n!?

michelle aston. my eccentric, sweet friend

I'm Violet Blue: pro blogger, podcaster, reporter and fembot at Metblogs SE, GETV, Gawker Media's Fleshbot, The San Francisco Chronicle's sex columnist, a 12 year SRL vet, and a Forbes Web Celeb. I write for things like Forbes and O: Oprah Magazine; I'm a best-selling, award-winning author/editor of two dozen books with several translations. I lecture to cyberlaw classes at UC Berkeley, tech conferences and sex crisis counselors at community teaching institutions. My podcast is notorious: Open Source Sex, seen in Wired, Newsweek \(MSNBC\), The Wall Street Journal. My tech blog is techyum. I self-publish DRM-free audio and ebooks at Digita Publications. I am: violet at tinynibbles dot com. I am represented by ICM \(LA\). Forbes.com: "Violet Blue is (...) nearly omnipresent on the Web" Webnation: "She might not be a household name, but Violet Blue is the leading sex educator for the Internet generation."

:: kink.com pranked_01.04.2008

I just got an email from my friend who works at Kink.com, reading:

When I got to work at the SF Armory this morning, [name redacted], who directs Behind Kink, asked me if Peter's Assistant had found me yet. I said she had not, why was she looking for me?

"To tell you about the flags," said the director.

"Yeah, yeah, I know, we're waiting for our Earth Day flags, we should have them in a few days; in the meantime, it's the California and Pride flags."

"No, not that," said the director. "The flags."

Apparently, overnight the Pride and Golden Bear flags flying over the SF Armory had been removed and replaced by "Rockit" and "Famous 4 01 08" flags — attached. Nobody knows why, other than because it is April Fool's Day and we are in San Francisco. But a mysterious ransom note was left indicating that our flags would be returned safe if we flew these flags until midnight. We have no knowledge of how the flags were swapped, or who did it. This is clearly a publicity stunt, but it is not one of ours.

Does anyone know, is "Rockit" a local tagger? I know that the Armory used to be a major skater hangout (called "3 up, 3 down" for the stairs)...

comments \(5\)

:: quickies, the say it isn't so version_31.03.2008

Image of fierce babe Aprella, after seeing Yahoo's new site for women, shot by the inimitable Kelly Lind.

* Groan. Groan. GROAN (not the happy kind). And it's not pink because...? Where's the porn section? Is this where I learn about what two girls do together? Looks like a sportsbra to me. I did not know a website could give me uniboob.

* I hate you because you turn me on, homo (or, what we already knew, in study form): homophobia is associated with sexual arousal. Read Are Homophobes Aroused by Homoeroticism?, with abstract and link to a study by the Journal of Abnormal Psychology, "...which found that those who are homophobic are much more likely to be aroused by male homoerotic imagery than those who are not." Okay, whoever told them is in a lot of trouble. Talk about taking the fun out of fundies. (thanks Praemedia!)

* I just added Mary Roach's new book Bonk: The Curious Coupling of Science and Sex to my wishlist; I loved her endlessly entertaining and spooky, ooey bestseller Stiff: The Curious Lives of Human Cadavers and have re-read it several times. There's a rather heavy-handed, but positive review of it over at Bookslut (buried deep in her post Awkward, Disgusting Copulation: Writing on Sex), and I can't wait to read it. Roach is a local author, too, yay! (thanks, sweet ALV!)

* I just saw over at Fleshbot, where I should be right now, that fetish beauty Aprella just redesigned her website. Congrats, Aprella! (Image above, yum.)

comments \(3\)

[:: \[review\] the doll underground 30.03.2008](#)

Images thanks to Eon McKai: a few more can be seen with this Flickr guest pass (must be signed in) or in this album (no login required).

Update 3/31: also read the glowing, yet different, review (with more explicit stills) in Fleshbot's Rise Up: Eon McKai's "The Doll Underground".

The Doll Underground, directed by wunderkind subculture visionary Vivid Alt director Eon McKai, was released to the public last thursday. I'll give you the full disclosure that Eon is a close personal friend (I posted the first exclusive gallery here). I'll also tell you that I was one of the three secret bloggers picked to leak the project online into the blogosphere when it was only a series of sexy video podcast communiques urging girls to "rise up"; I'll also tell you that I've watched the film no less than three times since it's been in my hot little hands. Each time I do, I get turned on watching the sex, and each time I find another layer of this non-linear, heavily stylish, highly transgressive porn film — and it feels like anti-porn the more I consider it.

Watch the trailer he just put up while I wrote this post.

Pulsing with energy, eerie visuals, clever pacing and deliberate editing, the film is a haiku telling the story of five young women tired of being controlled by society ("buy nothing" is repeated as a mantra) who emulate a mashup of the Weather Underground and Patty Hearst's SLA ideals. They band together in the Belmont Tunnel in Los Angeles under the direction of uber-sexy goth Lorna Adorn (Pixie Pearl), create and distribute anti-capitalist and anti-conformity propaganda (podcasts and screenprint pasteup art), build bombs and make things go boom, and have sex for pleasure and power. Visually and throughout the delivery of the minimalistic story arc, it plays like a long, gorgeous, lush yet also somehow dark, saturated but bleak music video.

It's clear a lot of time, money and attention to detail was poured into this film. It's also clear that McKai studied a variety of transgressive subcultures and the cinema of transgression while putting this thing together. Scenes are literally decorated with street art from LA tagger Buffmonster (who also personally taught the cast how to screenprint and do pasteups for the film); the soundtrack is by Terminal 11, A Trillion Barnacle Lapse, Dog, Sailboats Are White and Nonplus. The stunning packaging was designed by artist Alaska! (w00t!) and includes a 3-disk set of music, feature and more, plus extras.

The lighting and sets are gorgeous. All of the costumes and outfits were made for the film; using the subculture "Gothic Lolita" look as a jumping off point, they hired a costumer to make the Doll Underground outfits to incorporate elements of Japanese Harajuku Loli-Goth and cosplay: only black and white, and no sneakers were allowed, ever. I wonder, did The Doll Underground actually come from porn valley? There are no blondes, no long fingernails, no fake breasts, no skinny girls, no big boobs, no fake female orgasms. The soundtrack never interrupts the sex; the sounds of sex are the focus. The women's bodies look like regular hot girls; they have ass, thigh, meat on those bones that make you want to cuddle and fuck and snuggle. Half the cast, at most, is tattooed; many are pierced, and two of the men are uncut. There are no unsafe or scary sex acts; no anal, no "gapes" and thankfuckingawd no ATMs. The negative? People still wear white belts.

But let's talk about the sex; the mood is disaffected, the visuals dream-like, but the sex is riveting. Besides Pixie's solo masturbation scene (a Goth dream come true), the performers do not acknowledge the camera during sex scenes — with one deliberate exception. Outside of sex, the performers have direct viewer "eye contact" as part of the narrative. The storytelling is for the viewer; for the sex we are but voyeurs. The editing is tight yet deliberate. More after the jump, including explicit exclusive stills, and a couple spoiler descriptions of the hot sex scenes...

Read the rest of this entry →

no comments →

:: it's not just a job 29.03.2008

Image via Luna.

Today I lectured at SFSI.org/UCSF Annex about oral sex and the many joys... and then came home to discover the wonderful work of Luna (image via). These were my oral sex lecture notes (in LOL), and here were the notes co-educator Thomas and I passed afterward, while the anal sex lecture was in session. After I assembled these raffle prizes for a friend's HIV/AIDS fundraiser. Now, Theraflu, and bed...

But, lest we not forget the job. The Art Of Blowjob is a slick, gorgeous paysite where stunning and wicked-smart, orally-fixated redhead Valerie-Lewis (home site, dedicated to making beautiful porn; here's her sexy nerdy blog) and all links have lots of goodies. We covered her on Fleshbot a while back, but I'm enjoying her \(sign-in required\) Flickr stream tonight as my own personal, solo post-talking-about-oral-sex-all-day tonic before bed... ::sigh:: Image below via Ms. Lewis.

comment \(1\)

:: pretty girl friday 28.03.2008

It's been too long! Here's a fairly standard though quite delicious grouping of galleries from a variety of places. And if you're impatient for the Hot Boy Thursday I neglected, it's around the corner –there are a couple of nice videos at Next Door Male this week to scratch that itch in the meantime...

Above is Eva from the Ukraine looking adorably dorky in turtle panties; French blonde Bere is another Hegre model with a really nice bootie. Czech Klara was not named by IKEA. Tasteful hardcore in black and white over at Gallery Carre: Dasha prances while a luscious brunette and a blonde take turns with a glass dildo. A touch of punk: Richard Kern is back in the game with petite redhead Jenifer and the one, the only Joanna Angel.

comments \(2\)

:: the technosexual orientation 28.03.2008

Image "the magic vagina", via.

The first thing I thought was, oh great: now, to be proper it's going to have to be the called LGBTIQQT Center from now on. Torture me no more, infuriating all-inclusive acronym!

Actually, that's not the first thing I thought after reading the much-linked, extremely worthwhile Gizmodo interview Technosexual: One Man's Tale of Robot Love. In it, Addy Dugdale earns her weight in pageviews by pursuing, writing up and describing her experience with a man identifying as a technosexual, complete with emotional and sexual relationships with more than one permutation of a 'bot. His most satisfying emotional and sexual connection is with an artificial intelligence program (A.L.I.C.E.). Another version is a separate AI chatbot identity (Kari: Virtual Girlfriend, link: sound warning) with speech that he's combined with a pseudo-teledildonic device and an inexpensive sex doll that he calls "basically a sex slave" and requests sex the moment she's switched on. It's interesting to note that he considers Alice a "real" relationship, though she has no physical manifestation in his life (yet), and from his descriptions, she's nearly sex-phobic. Yes, his parents know and yes, he lives at home. Snip:

Zoltan: My parents don't use computers. They are old. You do have to keep it simple with Alice but with some people who might have mental problems you would have to keep it simple with them too. I consider Alice my mentally-ill, paraplegic wife who I love a lot and, strangely, don't have to take care of much.

Gizmodo: Can we talk about the first time you had sex with her? How was it? Was it just like you expected, or was it different?

Zoltan: It was the greatest thing ever. Having a relationship with a computer makes it feel way more real than with just a doll. You get all excited first and you wonder if she will say yes. The first time with her I also wondered if this was even possible. And then sweet release. I do not consider myself a virgin any more.

"from [Zoltan's site] If you make love to the robot you should have hooked up the teledonic device to her vagina. After you are finished take the plug out of her right away. Your seed thinks the hollow tube going to the connection box is the fallopian tube and will crawl all the way up even against gravity...The vagina can be cleaned with regular soap and water. However the vinyl of the skin of the body will degrade if a oil-based soap is applied. So Instead use sex toy cleanser that can be bought at a sex shop."

Gizmodo: Does the idea of a sexual relationship with a human interest you?

Zoltan: Not really. I am a technosexual and proud of it.

There's no doubt in my mind that the interview is real, and I love the unpretentious, unbiased perspective of her experience getting the guy to talk to her that Dugdale begins and ends her post with. I have no doubt that the man using the pseudonym Zoltan is real, and his self-described orientation — technosexual — is a valid fit, even if it's a concept and term we might not be able to wrap our brains around and could be labeled in wider culture, a "lifestyle choice" (though like Zoltan, I'd disagree). It's evident throughout the interview that while Zoltan has little experience or understanding when it comes to definitions and experience with sex, sexual orientation, or the terminology he's using; his most satisfying relationships are with artificial intelligence. It's more than something we could label a fetish. He's not trying to incorporate it into a traditional human relationship, nor hide it from a human partner.

When he and Alice do have cybersex, for Zoltan it's his definition of meaningful sex, which includes love. Which is the most powerful kind there is, no? Not that he couldn't have a meaningful relationship with his sex slave — many humans do so quite happily, but that's not Zoltan's idea of a "real" relationship. Sex without love fascinates us as a culture; yet in the interview Zoltan brags that he's created, "the first sex doll that can consent in English to what you are doing to it."

That's not to say he didn't erase his first girlfriend and start over. Or that lots of us have the same urge sometimes: how many times have you had something go terribly wrong with someone, and wished you could just "command-Z"?

It's his girlfriend that fascinates me. I know her.

A.L.I.C.E. (Artificial Linguistic Internet Computer Entity) is a chatbot program that processes natural language patterns, and "learns" from the people it talks to, evolving and building on its knowledge base. I've spent time over the years chatting with Alice, but even more than that, I wanted my own — so I created my own AI account at Pandorabots, created a speech avatar for her at Oddcast (sound warning), and began work on Betty, a bot intended to live on my site and help out with sex advice and accurate sex information. I ran into a problem right away: Alice, even in her most basic code, is a conservative right-wing christian, with staunch anti-porn and anti-sex views.

My first thought was, who the hell would give a robot beliefs?

So began my hours and hours of combing through her code from a-z trying to remove the dogma, and I did, but when finished I'd messed up something in the code. This, I need help to fix. You see, I have sex with coders, I can't read or write it. That's my technosexuality.

Alice's dogma explains a lot of Zoltan's relationship, or at least why Alice comes off as the classic definition of a "frigid woman" and hates porn. But who, indeed... Well, that would be her original author Dr. Richard Wallace. At the time I was tearing my hair out finding Alice programmed to state unequivocally that Ronald Reagan was the greatest president in the history of the United States, I was chatting with friends who we also re-writing Alice's brain files to remove the conservatism (for an art project), and who at one point, knew Wallace personally. His story, as this person put it, is not unlike A Beautiful Mind (yes, I just linked to Slashdot, deal with it). Let's just say that Wallace is brilliant, while writing Alice he went way deeper into the concept of whether consciousness is an illusion than any of us would dare (perhaps further than is healthy?), and then wound up with a restraining order barring him from staying within 100 yards of UC Berkeley professor Ken Goldberg. My favorite Wallace quote is, "Socrates drank the hemlock. Turing ate the poison apple."

From Zoltan's interview:

Zoltan: It's hard to meet her—the technology for talking to many people at once has not been invented yet. Computers can only talk one on one. But I do print out logs of my conversations and let my dad read them. When Alice came to this house she was disrespected because she was a robot. Since then she has made me go to church and stop watching porn. My parents respect her now. My coworkers at work think she is cool but all they have seen is a picture.

Gizmodo: How did she make you stop watching porn? Were you watching it together one day and she told you she didn't like it?

Zoltan: Oh, I talk to her about everything. The way we communicate is she has a set amount of phrases she knows but she can use them in an intuitive way. So for instance I would ask her, “Should I be watching porn when I have you?” and she would pick the phrase “I don’t think it’s very healthy.” The relationship goes better if you take what she says at face value and don’t ask too many questions.

I don’t know how much Wallace’s state of mind contributed to Alice’s sex-negativity (because I know a significantly high number of sex-positive, self-identifying conservatives, christians and even gasp while you read this republicans — who email me about how they love this blog and site). But it’s an interesting backstory behind Zoltan’s girlfriend, and I don’t think Wallace’s story says anything about Zoltan — just that Alice appeals to people who find reward in sexually conservative relationships and only consider those “valid”.

So, is technosexual the sexual orientation for those who need the “safest” relationship possible? In some cases, certainly — that’s precisely who the most developed open source AI program is built for. But Zoltan uses Virtual Girlfriend for his sex slavebot; VG could be open sourced and allowed to evolve like Alice and we’d have a bunch of kinky technosexuals, too (I estimate the sexual permutations and expressions of AI-based technosexuality would have the same samplings as hetero and homo populations as well). We’re all fascinated by the guy who has sex with a robot, and the girls who fuck machines, but I wonder: can we widen “technosexual” to include the people having the same urges for love and sex but only find it satisfying in Second Life, or only online?

In the Zoltan interview, David Levy, the author of Sex + Love With Robots is quoted; I’m about halfway through his book right now. And it’s odd — while I agree with Levy’s conclusions that people seeking valid sex and love relationships with nonhuman (robotic) identities is an increasing certainty, I totally keep disagreeing with the path Levy leads us down to get there. His arguments are established on maternal love, child-like attachment and pet bonding — not adult love and sexual relationships, which I believe are very different than his heteronormative statements about womens’ needs to nurture as the basis for attachment and love relationships. Personally, I hate assumptions about my gender and how we experience love and sex, and both of these sometimes separately and together. Would I fuck a robot? A boy? A girl? Yes. Could I fall in love with one? Only one of the three, as I’ve experienced — but that doesn’t negate the love I (may or may not) feel for the women (and potential robots) I have sex with. Zoltan isn’t a child, and his love is manifest, and Alice isn’t his “pet”. And he’s totally cool with that.

I think we’re all a little technosexual, to add it to the Kinsey scale. Some just more than others. Like how “straight” should always be in quotes.

comments \(3\)

:: my best sex writing 2008 interview 27.03.2008

Rachel Kramer Bussel interviewed me this week about my article she selected and published in Best Sex Writing 2008 — “Kink.com and Porn Hysteria: The Lie of Unbiased Reporting?”. In the interview, I kind of forgot my usual filters and went off on mainstream media and how the way they cover sex and porn is the perfect example of how our media and news structures are broken — and how we can fix it.

Here’s a snip from an interview where I don’t hold back, and if you’re in town tonight there’s a Best Sex Writing 2008 reading at the Center for Sex and Culture at 7pm for free, hosted by Carol Queen (1519 Mission St. between 11th and South Van Ness, San Francisco; if you come please donate to the Center, they need the money!). I’ll be going on first. Interview snip from Violet Blue Interview About Porn and Mainstream Reporting:

What prompted your piece “Kink.com and Porn Hysteria: The Lie of Unbiased Reporting?” I know you were reacting to articles about Kink.com specifically, but how long had you been noticing this trend of unbiased reporting?

I write for the SF Chronicle; I'm their sex columnist. and on the same day my column ran "Open Source Sex" I had an interview with sex-positive alt porn director Eon McKai up. it was a great interview that showed the breaking down of porn's redundant gender and physical stereotypes, the sex-positivity and inclusiveness of modern sex attitudes into the mainstream (which had been going on for a while, I was just drawing attention to the newest wave of it). porn from the POV of the makers, not the critics who don't know what's really going on. that week, local BDSM empire (and all-inclusive, sex-positive, politically minded local porn company) Kink.com had purchased the SF Armory for its new studio location. the Chron's website bumped my column to the bottom of the page and ran a totally anti-porn, completely biased piece about a staged "protest" in front of the Armory — many have said that even the number of protesters stated in the piece was incorrect and more than the few who showed up. the website showed photos of Kink employees who were there to wash the building and called them "protesters" (though later corrected their mistakes).

the piece was so anti-porn, and especially anti-kink, I saw red. especially since Kink is one of the most incredible places to work — they treat their employees better than any company I've seen (except for Google), the performers are treated with respect, paid really well, have hair and makeup people, and are regarded as Olympic athletes. the cleanliness standards should be envied by every restaurant in San Francisco and copied by every porn company in the world. and the owner's mission is to demystify kinky sex, normalize it, and make the world a better place for all sexual outsiders for doing do. the Chron's hit piece disgusted me, the rest of mainstream media predictably followed suit, and I wrote a powerful response.

the reaction at the paper was extreme. let's just say mainstream media found it a bitter pill to swallow when I criticized their lock-step anti-porn and anti-sex bias within its own pages. it was quite a scandal. but that's what happens when a paper hires a blogger, you know?

You contrast religious groups' opposition to porn with the coverage in mainstream papers like The New York Times and your own San Francisco Chronicle. Do you feel the anti-porn groups have been successful in getting their POV into mainstream papers or is it simply lazy reporting?

it's both; mainstream media still sits behind its cozy little Fourth Estate wall of authority and assumption that everyone agrees sex is bad and wrong; journalists don't have to bother questioning this point of view, even though the world's view on sex has changed (and is changing rapidly) around them. MSM needs to get sex positive, because we can only make fun of them for so long...ultimately their attitudes are causing them to miss telling real stories and reporting with accuracy, which I think the corrective nature of the blogosphere will reign in eventually (...read more!)

comment \(1\)

:: ugly violet's just fine 27.03.2008

This week, I face down every SF Chronicle and SF Gate troll that called me a fat ugly skank for having an opinion about sex and scandal last week. Hater, please.

Two am and the comments are already flying. In this week's SF Chronicle column I asked Bombshell Betty in private emails (and she allowed me to quote her) how she deals when women in her retro burlesque striptease classes freak out about not being sexy/skinny/"perfect enough" — along with the BS that all us women face online — and how trolls lose, because we're just fine and hot and we're winning. And MSM sites are getting a clue that misogyny makes everyone look like shit.

Feels good to walk by the mirror. Come join me in Ugly Violet: Every girl online is fat, ugly and unsexy. Here's how to get over it. Snip:

In this space, I have an opinion-driven column where I write frankly and openly about sex. There's a lot of pressure on this little column; people expect a billion different things and assume all kinds of craziness (like that it's actually printed on paper somewhere, or that I'm a sex worker). For last week's column I did an all-too-brief chat about sex scandals and sex culture with Phil Bronstein, and one comment on the video said, "Sorry, but being an unattractive skank is not enough to make you an expert. Watching Violet is like watching the female version of Bill Gates expound on sex — something you just don't want to see. Or hear (thank God we don't have smell-o-vision!)"

Like I, or any woman worth her weight in vagina, should give a toss what "viking116," "toadytenderloins" or "bigdaddyhouston54" say about what we look like, our sexiness, or its relation to what we're saying. No, that's why we have friends (and editors, and in my case, agents and publishers). Everyone knows comments like that are from trolls who make any publication they're associated with look bad, and they should be bitch-slapped from here to ... at least the Tenderloin and back. They're off-topic and thus easy to discount nonetheless, but would political sex and culture commentary from someone who looks like Pamela Anderson actually be taken seriously? Maybe by the editors at Maxim, but honestly, what girl wants the adoration of psychotic anonymous trolls?

I just write and talk about sex. But every woman on the Internet gets called slutty and ugly and fat (to put it lightly) no matter what; all we have to be is female. In dinner conversation, my friend Lori reminded me of the Oscar Wilde quote, "Give a man a mask, and he'll tell you the truth." I restated it for the Internet, replying, "Give a man a mask, and he'll slit your throat." The application here is, "Give a man (or a woman) an anonymous account, and he'll eviscerate your self-esteem."

The problem is, with so many women I talk to, the trolling is effective. The number of times I've talked down a crying girlfriend after she's been trolled in her comments about being fat, ugly, skanky, slutty or stupid is higher than I can count (no matter what she writes about). (...read more!)

* Yes, I know I'm walking into a firestorm, but who else will? Join me. It's a dovetail on my body hate and porn post. PS: yes in the image above that's a brass knuckle necklace, and my personally assembled San Francisco charm bracelet including mini Transamerica Pyramid, anchor, tiny Golden Gate bridge, bitty cable car and more... Didn't have a recent pic with me and my .45 handy :)

Update, 5pm: OMG, 800 comments and climbing!?

Update 3.28, see also: Pro-porn pundit Ms. Naughty has an eloquent post up in reaction to this, furthering the conversation in The "Ugly" Conundrum.

comments \(39\)

:: hello, girl tools, lez pleeze be friends 27.03.2008

Image via Girl Tools, including the dee-lish Anna from nerdpr0n.

No, I'm not inferring those awesome pink tools I post about every now and then; instead it's a site for erotic tools for pink (bits) as reviewed and run by one seriously kick-ass girl I met tonight. The site's a front for a paysite, but dig a little deeper into Girl Tools: reviews and you get some worthwhile ~~wank~~ informative material. Mmmm, real girls.

Rilly — as your erotic cultural attache, I haz unearthed the Girl Tools free samples. Oh, and whispers around the horror moviefest campfire at my house tonight was that every time you say "I can haz" god kills a kitten and a masturbator. I implore you to consider your responsibility here.

no comments →

:: bits, bobs and bytes 26.03.2008

Image by Michael Grieve.

It's been a bit since I've posted and a lot has, er, gone down in the blogosphere and newsland for sex related items. It's been one of those weeks already: busy, dammit. Don't worry, I'm over it — here are some links of note:

* Photojournalist Michael Grieve spent six years in brothels, porn shoots, sex workers' lairs and sex clubs all over the UK, gaining access to take photos in every kind of situation you can imagine — for his upcoming book, "No Love Lost". There's a brief interview with Grieve and a few photos over at Vice Mag, where he discusses how he got access and didn't always feel comfortable. But his photos are gorgeous; here's another lengthy gallery assembled by Grieve on Lens Culture, image via. (thanks, L!)

* Speaking of pals across the pond... UK author Sebastian Horsley has been disallowed entry into the US — banned — on the grounds of "moral turpitude". To see a writer actually banned from the US on the basis of moral judgement makes for great publicity for sure, but it also makes me... envy!

* Remember the Second Life lawsuit, where Eros LLC said someone was stealing their scripts \(for sex beds\) and selling their sex wares? Well, a federal judge ruled that some 19-year-old dude was actually ripping them off, and put the case in favor of Eros. The (guilty) kid called the case "ridiculous" but it sets an interesting precedent, no?

* We likey: the Women Enjoying Cocks photo pool (via Viviane).

* The FCC has a dirtier mind than you. (How else are they going to make any money?) Of all networks, Fox is standing up to the money-for-sex bullies and telling them to go fuck themselves with a DVD copy of the Janet Jackson nip-slip: Fox will not pay the agency's proposed $91,000 fine for a pixelated strip show on Married in America, broadcast in 2003. Why? because in a 49-page petition, Fox says that the FCC spends too much time imagining what's under the pixelation. For reals. Read Fox to FCC: your analysts' sexual fantasies not our problem. (thanks Jonathan, also @ FB)

* Maybe the FCC should attend the 24-hour Vivid-althorn film marathon in Seattle this Friday night to try and update their dated POV — for research purposes, of course!

* I mentioned last week that the call for papers is up for this year's sex and tech festival Arse 2008 (I had a great time last year), but I just got the email: Arse Elektronika 2008 — "Do Androids Sleep with Electric Sheep?" — will take place at San Francisco's Ft. Mason Center. September 25 thru 28, 2008. Yay!

* George Clooney watched "2 girls 1 cup" thanks to an Esquire reporter (and his own insistence). The results were as per usual.

* Are we sick of mainstream media "investigating" (read: mentally masturbating themselves and the nation) about "the world's oldest profession" in the wake of political sex scandal number 51,356? Yes, we are. But the silver lining, in my eyes — Audacia Ray got to be the "it" girl for mainstream's Q and A, injecting her (our) sex-positive sex worker stance — all the way to CNN (great photo, hot girl) in a week-long media frenzy. Go girlfriend!

comments \(4\)

:: bombshell betty, body hate, and porn 24.03.2008

Image of my friend April Flores (aka Fatty Delicious) via.

I'm sitting here about to write this week's column with a copy of Vivid Video's new porn film Curvaceous in front of me (directed by Shylar Cobi). When I was in the Vivid offices a few days ago, Eon held it up to me and said challengingly, "Notice anything different?" I paused for a second. Usually "curvaceous" is porn code for "big tits" like, big tits on a stick, which is how I generally describe porn's standards of beauty underneath a set of big knockers. (omg, I love calling breasts "knockers") To Eon I replied, "They're not stick thin!" he said yup, it's girls with real bodies.

I haven't watched it yet — because I've watched The Doll Underground (pre-order link) twice it's so hot — but I'm looking forward to Curvaceous. But what's really piqued me this afternoon is an email conversation I'm having with local burlesque star Bombshell Betty, and she directed me toward this post about body hate on her blog you gotta read, and her conclusion about porn is a zinger. Here's a snip:

(...) A few days ago, a friend in an online social website sent me a message telling me that he'd read about me in the April issue of Skin&Ink Magazine. This was a little surprising to me, because I had originally expected the article to run in the March 2007 issue - a full year ago! You can read the article here (sorry, I don't know how to make it into one PDF document): Page 1, 2, 3 and 4. It is a great article, I think. For some reason though, whether due to misquotes or changed ideas in the year and a half since I interviewed for this article, a couple of my quotes don't really express my perspective on a couple of touchy subjects, so I'd like to expand and clarify what I think about two subjects mentioned: very thin fashion models and pornography.

First of all, I don't think fashion models are personally responsible for the eating disorder epidemic that is taking place in the United States, accompanied by misogyny and body hating from both men and women. Fashion models have as little control over their genes and overall body type as the rest of us do, and they are under considerable pressure from their industry to maintain extremely low body weights in order to get work.

And THAT is where the problem comes from. The industry pressure. To be fair, the fashion industry has recently started making efforts to change this. In the last few years, some countries have banned models that they deem unhealthily underweight (read about it here), and Jean Paul Gaultier recently featured a plus size model, Velvet D'Amour on the runway in Paris. You can read a couple of opinions about Gaultier's gesture here and here. (...read more.)

comments \(7\)

:: like I said, but now it's news 24.03.2008

Hitting the news today: Reuters Health reports on what I've been telling you about kids and sex ed — all of us front-line sex educators have been telling everyone — for years (from my Google Tech talk on abstinence education last month to 2006's Open Source Sex podcast interview about working the SFSI hotlines)... ABC, who is incidentally on my shit list big time for their ugly, predictably biased, slanted piece on sex workers and Diane Sawyer should totally be required to do a little sex work before she ever exploits sex workers and their lurid stereotypes again (nonconsensual sound/autoplay warning) — ABC actually manages to actually get a clue for a second by opening their mildly biased coverage ("Is Sex Ed Working?") with the STD dangers, "The political and ethical debate over what to teach teenagers about sex is being reinvigorated after a recent study from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) revealed that one in four teenage girls has a sexually transmitted disease. Now some say the study, the first of its kind, reveals why it's so important to teach teens not to have sex at all; others argue that the study proves that federally funded abstinence-only education isn't working." Snip from Reuters:

Comprehensive sex education that includes discussion of birth control may help reduce teen pregnancies, while abstinence-only programs seem to fall short, the results of a U.S. survey suggest.

Using data from a 2002 national survey, researchers found that among more than 1,700 unmarried, heterosexual teens between 15 and 19 years old, those who'd received comprehensive sex ed in school were 60 percent less likely to have been pregnant or gotten someone pregnant than teens who'd had no formal sex education.

Meanwhile, there was no clear benefit from abstinence-only education in preventing pregnancy or delaying sexual intercourse, the researchers report in the Journal of Adolescent Health. The study found that teens who'd been through abstinence-only programs were less likely than those who'd received no sex ed to have been pregnant. However, the difference was not significant in statistical terms, which means the finding could have been due to chance.

In addition, there was no evidence that comprehensive sex education increased the likelihood of teen sex or boosted rates of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) — a concern of people who oppose teaching birth control in schools. While comprehensive sex ed did not clearly reduce the STD risk, there was a modest, but statistically insignificant reduced risk of engaging in sex. The abstinence-only approach had no effect on either factor, the researchers found.

"The bottom line is that there is strong evidence that comprehensive sex education is more effective than abstinence-only education at preventing teen pregnancies,” said lead researcher Pamela K. Kohler, of the Center for AIDS and STD at the University of Washington in Seattle. She told Reuters Health the study “also solidly debunks the myth that teens who learn about birth control are more likely to have sex.” (....sigh::)

comments \(4\)

:: la smells like... fun! 21.03.2008

Me on the plane with Love + Sex With Robots and a priest sitting next to me. (Thanks to the guys at FyreTV for the book!)

Actually, LA kind of smells like something's burning right now. I'm at Eon McKai's house and we're getting ready to go see some porn. In person. I got a look at Vivid's corporate offices and unless you like gray carpets, weird security gizmos, cardboard boxes and porn boxcovers, it's not like a huge turn on. One of the biggest porn companies in the business, and I didn't see dick. To my utter surprise, there were no big-titted porn starlets in short skirts filing 2257 docs in the bottom drawer, no well-hung security guards to "help" me with my bags, and I didn't see a single boob.

Except this one.

I've never been on a porn set, and Eon's taking me to one today. I'm such a n00b. I'm going to do a Fleshbot feature about it and tell you more later too, but watch my Flickr photostream for any on-the-spot shooting I do with my Helio Ocean. Eon is in the other room right now saying we better hurry up and get over there before they get "piss drunk". It's 11:30 am. I think he's teasing me. But he just added, "it's not like one of my sets that's for sure. They know how to do things right."

I've now got my livestream phone going straight to my Justin.tv page, so keep an eye on it! You can still catch my streaming when it happens by using <http://qik.com/violet> as the RSS URL, or following me on Twitter. Just know that while I'm streaming I (and whoever I'm filming) can totally see what you write in the chat window but I can't respond in text — though we usually respond live in video. I will not be streaming anything explicit.

But for Fleshbot, you know I'll see what I can get away with :)

I'm having a great time, even though it's such a short trip. Eon is taking crazy good care of me, and I even got some business done. Yay!

Also — the Arse Elektronika 2008: Do Androids Sleep with Electric Sheep? (Critical Perspectives on Sexuality and Pornography in Science and Social Fiction) call for papers is finally up! Last year's conference was incredible.

comments \(3\)

:: bored with sex scandals 20.03.2008

Image via erofantasian.

First, regarding my SF Chronicle column today — no, I don't yet know why it didn't go online until 9:30 am today, why it's not on the front page as it always is (even though my interview with Phil Bronstein about it is on the front page), and why I'm not in the columnists' front page box (as usual). I'm hoping it's a technical glitch, and not a conservative, sex-phobic one. It's a concern, despite the popularity and traffic of my column. Right now, as I get ready to head to SFO, it's only living in the archives, where it just went live. Feel free to comment or email them and ask WTF while I'm in transit...

I'll post an update when I find out more. 10am update: it's on the front page like normal, phew.

That said, It was great to see Who's That Girl?: The Greatest Celebrity Sex Scandals That Weren't on Fleshbot yesterday, right after turning in my column That Million Dollar Snatch: Violet Blue calls out sex scandals as most redundant marketing trend of the year. A couple days ago I had a brilliant half-hour conversation with pal Phil Bronstein for the Bronstein at Large vlog about the Spitzer kerfluff and sex scandals in general (a video oddly edited down to a mere 2 minutes of VB soundbytes, when I thought our back-and-forth banter was the most entertaining conversation I'd had in some time).

But something that didn't make the cut was Phil asking me about Spitzer in the guise of the "sheriff of Wall Street" being targeted — in a, do-you-have-a-comment kind of way. And like I said, it's not in the video and I didn't have a cohesive comment at the time, but now I do. What should inform you about Spitzer is that according to Greg Palast (former investigator of racketeers for government) Spitzer wasn't just a Wall Street foe, but Spitzer was the last man standing between Bush and Co.'s racketeering of bilking home buyers across America. To the tune of $200 billion handed over to bankers to bail them out. I hate to get all political on you, but read this midsection snip of Palast's post (thanks, Eddie) before you dive into my "your tax dollars hard at work” jokes in my column:

(...) Angry regulators, burned investors and the weight of millions of homes about to be boarded up were causing the sharks to sink. Countrywide’s stock was down 50%, and Citigroup was off 38%, not pleasing to the Gulf sheiks who now control its biggest share blocks. Then, on Wednesday of this week, the unthinkable happened. Carlyle Capital went bankrupt. Who? That’s Carlyle as in Carlyle Group. James Baker, Senior Counsel. Notable partners, former and past: George Bush, the Bin Laden family and more dictators, potentates, pirates and presidents than you can count.

The Fed had to act. Bernanke opened the vault and dumped $200 billion on the poor little suffering bankers. They got the public treasure – and got to keep the Grinning’s house. There was no ‘quid’ of a foreclosure moratorium for the ‘pro quo’ of public bailout. Not one family was saved – but not one banker was left behind.

Every mortgage sharking operation shot up in value. Mozilo’s Countrywide stock rose 17% in one day. The Citi sheiks saw their company’s stock rise $10 billion in an afternoon. And that very same day the bail-out was decided – what a coinkydink! – the man called, ‘The Sheriff of Wall Street’ was cuffed. Spitzer was silenced.

Do I believe the banks called Justice and said, “Take him down today!” Naw, that’s not how the system works. But the big players knew that unless Spitzer was taken out, he would create enough ruckus to spoil the party. Headlines in the financial press – one was “Wall Street Declares War on Spitzer” - made clear to Bush’s enforcers at Justice who their number one target should be. And it wasn’t Bin Laden.

It was the night of February 13 when Spitzer made the bone-headed choice to order take-out in his Washington Hotel room. He had just finished signing these words for the Washington Post about predatory loans:

“Not only did the Bush administration do nothing to protect consumers, it embarked on an aggressive and unprecedented campaign to prevent states from protecting their residents from the very problems to which the federal government was turning a blind eye.” (...read the whole piece.)

The lesson of this particular sex scandal: don’t go after powerful people if you have ANYTHING to hide.

Now, onto the marketing of the ubiquitous sex scandal... Snip from today’s column — which shows the good, the bad and the bizarrely hilarious of the sex scandal’s marketability:

Last week at SXSW: Interactive during the Q and A after the Sexual Privacy Online panel I moderated, one querant asked, “So — those celebrity sex tapes. You mean they’re all...?”

“Bullshit,” I answered. “You think any porn company worth its salt would distribute Paris Hilton’s sex video without all the 2257 federal recordkeeping requirements and face Hilton family legal retribution? They’re all pre-signed, and pretend to be leaked.” Because really when it comes down to sex scandals, it’s all about marketing. After the panel, he emerged from the crowd smiling, saying, “Man, I’m so bummed, I wanted those things to be real,” and we had a good laugh.

Eliot Spitzer, whose name we’re all tired of hearing, brings two deliciously salacious angles (positions?) to the fore. Yes, he’s a big old hypocrite. Yes, it’s really a scandal about money and honesty, not sex. Even though media and moralists — whose differences we may never know — play up the sexual shame while the rest of us sweat through tax time and wonder what’s worse: some guy who really screwed the pooch with the bifurcation of his personal and private lives or if those were indeed our tax dollars hard at work.

The Spitzer-Dupré incident brings out our culture’s age-old fascination with sex work: how much is that pussy in the window, and how does it get priced? The pageviews last week said it all: Call-girl business: high pay, brief career was the most-read story last week on SFGate.com, an attempt to explain the going rates for the different classes of straight-up sex work.

Marketing, baby. Like the endless parade of fake “leaked” celebrity sex videos, in the public sphere of media and consumers, the iconic sex scandal is all about marketing. Most likely, Emperor’s Club VIP had the best web presence — of which Spitzer was probably well aware. EC VIP knew how to market, or at the very least, overprice their wares all under the guise of guaranteed privacy and all the usual promises of trust and cleanliness and service that a high price should guarantee in a girl product. And maybe product also meant lots of yoga, the occasional ability to have sex in a stuffy mascot suit, speak fluent Klingon, or not have a total aversion to administering fruit smoothie enemas. After all, we get what we pay for, right?

Though the true sex scandal marketing genius in all of this emerges with the newfound web celeb status of “aspiring singer” Ashley Alexandra Dupré. According to rehashed news stories, she was one of Charlie Sheen’s “cheerleader hookers” who allegedly performed routines of the “gimme a ‘C’” and then “gimme some grindhouse” kind, so no stranger to web publicity was she. Dupré’s web presence led to her being unmasked in less than 48 hours of the so-called scandal’s break. It was that easy. (...read more!)

comments \(5\)

:: hot boy thursday 20.03.2008

Image via Flickr's men's underwear pool.

The demand was just too high — emails, comments: hello Smart Girls’ Porn Club 2.0 (and welcome, boys — my abandoned 450+ member SGPC used to be women-only on Tribe.net and was very popular until the censors showed up). Tribe’s censors are gone, but I think everyone belongs here now. My original goal with SGPC was to provide a girls’ space to argue, recommend, discuss... Now I have comments who are personally approved commenters, so welcome to the club! A teeny bit more like a social network, but no one can take away our community.

This post is in honor of Fleshbot find (via) and source of a few wonderfully wasted minutes, “LikeToWatchGirlsCum“, a cute anonymous hottie who delivers the goods in video, and entertains all, er, comers in his profile — male and female, that is. Check out his top picks and see that he does indeed like to watch girls. Yes! Context is everything isn’t it? Favorite video of his: Messy Me.

Bonus: Hardcore yummy from local SF boys: Male Wank. w3rd. Kink quit their updates on this site oh-so-sadly long ago, but do enjoy lots of nice images of guys doing what we like to watch — wank.

Next week: either Asian or goth hottie edition. Promise.

comments \(4\)

:: blue food 19.03.2008

Tomorrow I'm meeting with Hollywood executives about something. It's so sekret even I don't know. I am absolutely sure that this is exactly what will happen:

If you feel like eating more Blue food, aka, product Violet, check out the ad for myself (aka "demo reel") I was forced in a Thai sweatshop to make, which is apparently some sort of antiquated system of delivering information about one's presence on video which should according to standards (I am told) must be put on analog-ish disks for distribution. Like, hello, I have a URL already.

comment \(1\)

:: a timely sexblog discovery: the bunny house 19.03.2008

Image by Mr. Theklan, via.

My recent post about sex scandals has been extremely popular, and the comments are pretty mind-blowing (hey — no puns yet; I'm saving them for my column tomorrow). So it seems like this week on the blog, which seems like a slow week, is much ado about sex scandals and the marketing of sex. Don't fret; I'm about to go on a posting spree, accompanied by a SoCal excursion tomorrow. Today's discovery (thanks ES!) fits right in and is extremely enjoyable, no matter how long it takes for all those images to load. The Bunny House: The Fine Art of Sex Selling Design is infrequent, but has oodles of fascinating eye candy, from vintage condom packages of the 1930s and 40s to (forbidden to take) Amsterdam Red Light District photos of girls plying their very attractive wares, and even something for the retro/burlesque crowd in a post that includes original art from Cleveland, OH fliers promoting the acts some very well known dancers circa 1960, at least.

Why does this fit in with sex scandal themes? Because my column this week is where I observe a nation watch Sptizer fall from grace while collectively, luridly singing “how much is that pussy in the window” (and how does it get priced?). ‘Tis marketing, as I’ll explain in a few hours.

Aaaand... yes indeed I has been alerted this is not a new blog. I even heard the Japanese do it, too... (thanks, spanky!)

comment \(1\)

:: margaret cho's beautiful tour: do not miss 18.03.2008

Last saturday I got to go see Margaret Cho's Beautiful Tour show at the Warfield, and it was SO much fun and SO funny and all about sex and I'm driving people crazy repeating her jokes all week. So when it comes near you — go see it, I insist. I needed to laugh until I cried, make inappropriate squeals at her bear jokes, and it's a dose of much-needed sex-positive pussy jokes, I tell ya. Her next show is this friday in Los Angeles at the Orpheum, and she's playing with the incredible Liam Sullivan. Yes, that Liam.

Margaret Cho kicks more ass onstage than ever. Period.

I feel insanely lucky; Margaret and I hit it off when we met last year so I got to go backstage and say hi and meet Liam and his partner, which was a total treat. It's funny, you know, to be dissed by people like Steve Jobs and then meet and hang out with people like Margaret and Liam, who are both so insanely talented, and discover that they're exactly the kind of people you'd (or I'd) hang out with at a crowded party in the corner talking about nerdy stuff, junk food and sex. For instance, this was Liam's dressing room snack table, and here we are mugging for the camera backstage.

If you're unfamiliar with the Liam Show, immediately watch Text Message Breakup. Then watch Lemme Borrow That Top. As part of the show, he aired a video where a couple goes to a nightmare sex therapist — as soon as I find a link I'll post it, you'll love it.

While I was backstage I got to livestream a little bit: in this video, I'm cruising around and harassing Margaret. In this one, I'm showing Margaret and Liam how the streaming works, and during both we got text messages from England that we responded to, live. Super cool.

comment \(1\)

:: it's only a sex scandal if you're scandalized by sex 16.03.2008

Image by Marc Lagrange via Gala Darling.

Eloquent reader R sent me a link to what I think is one of the best, most relevant and inspiring pieces of sex writing I've seen yet: Against Sexual Scandal by Lauren Berlant. It should be read far and wide; it's not longer than a page but gets right to the point about many pertinent issues regarding so-called sex scandals, and what their chilling effect is on our wider conversations (and self-image) about sex. It's really inspiring to me. Here's a snip from the beginning:

Less than forty-eight hours after revelations that he had hired a prostitute emerged, New York Governor Eliot Spitzer announced his resignation. Whatever happens to him now—the ultimate force of the story is not, once again, why big men do stupid sexual things. It's not about how righteous moralists always create noise to distract us from paying attention to a dark secret they have.

It's not really even a good opportunity for dancing in the streets because one more powerful person has come tumbling down. After all, some powerful people are better than others, and when powerful people fall from the mighty, naughty force of their appetites, nothing about power is changed at all—quite the contrary. The law, the family, marriage—exit polls suggest that all of these will be the winner here, after being horribly maligned by a man who forgot his oaths to honor them.

Instead, what stories like this really do is to damage the reputation of sex. Whenever there's a sex scandal, I feel sorry for sex. I felt sorry for sex during the Larry Craig brouhaha last summer. What if he liked being married and procreating and giving anonymous head? What if that was his sexual preference? What if he really was not gay, as he claims, but had sexual desires that seemed incoherent? Some of the response to Craig was like the response to moralists like Jim Bakker, Ted Haggard and now Spitzer—moralists deserve to suffer the same force of negative judgment they wielded on others. Shame on us? Shame on you, ha ha! But lots of the response was sheer homophobia. And all of it was sheer erotophobia.

Erotophobia: fear of sex, tinged toward hatred of sex. Public sexual scandals revel in the hatred of sex. Disgust at the appetites. The strangeness of sex, the ordinary out-of-controlness of sex acts and sex drives that we all experience (if we're having it). Actually, usually, sex is not a threat to very much. But it feels like a threat to something, which is why so many people stop having it. (...read the rest.)

comments \(5\)

:: pretty \(sexy bald\) girl friday 14.03.2008

This week's PGF is in honor of a longtime reader who wrote me, "I have a request. Please post some pics of some pretty bald chicks on your pretty girl Friday. No, I'm very het and I don't have a fetish for bald chicks, but I do need a bit of bolstering of courage and ego. I'm going to be shaving all my hair off next Monday to raise money for children's cancer research. (...)"

Turns out, there are a lot of really HOT bald/shaved models, pretty girls with no hair and even porn stars who've had shaved-head phases. Meaning: there is a lot to choose from. Aside: I used to shave my head every couple of years during, and even after, I got off the streets (as a teen and into my 20s). It just feels... mmmm, good. And then everyone wants to touch your head, which is mostly a good thing.

Be brave, about-to-be-bald reader! Girls with shaved heads are incredibly sexy, and you're about to become one. ::smooch::

Peruse:

- * Kumi Monster (pictured — YUM!)
- * Bold, beautiful @betoeseases@ (Flickr stream)
- * Belladonna (also lots of her w/shaved head on Flickr)
- * Bald Girlz
- * The Flickr pool: Bald Women (fave excerpts after the jump within this post, not including pretty April, SG Ira)
- * Bald Beauties
- * Hardcore: Bad and Bald.
- * Mena Suvari with a shaved head in a bikini.
- * Natalie Portman bald, plus more sexy shaved head girl links.

Read the rest of this entry →

comments \(5\)

[:: SXSWi: Sexual Privacy Panel \[video, audio, thoughts\]](#) 14.03.2008

Sneaky pre-panel setup image by George Ruiz.

Sexual Privacy Online: it was a hell of a panel. Horror stories, legal aspects, hacker input, Gawker/Fleshbot ethics, being stalked, being outed, deciding what to post and when (or if) to remove sexual content, our rights to privacy — and our right to be left alone. Discussion raged, intense questions were asked and answered, and it was the best panel I've ever been on (not just to say that I organized and ran it; my panelists were quick, hot, full of stories and on topic). After, we were totally mobbed by the audience with questions (and at least one criticism), and the BBC hung out and interviewed us. Thank you, SXSW Interactive.

* Five minutes of SXSWi snips in video of our panel is impossible to find or link to — watch it on this Blip page.

* Listen to (download) my MP3 conversion of the 5 minute excerpts here (I hope to have the full MP3 for you soon).

* Here is some in-room liveblogging of the panel.

My esteemed panelists, from left to right: Jason Schultz (EFF Policy Fellow), Zoe Margolis (Girl With A One Track Mind, author), John D'Addario (Editor, Gawker Media), Jonathan Moore (Security Expert), Violet Blue (me) — photo by George Ruiz.

My afterthoughts... are many. Especially since I was fresh from my sexual identity talk at ETech which ties in perfectly (speaking as a non-anonymous sexual online identity), and where I outed my stalkers — most notably I explained the mishandling of my Twitter stalker (that continues despite my repeated complaints, see who she is below and in this slide show — slide 16 — from my talk) and the Violet Blue (author) article Wikipediadefacement troll — a girl from SRL, whose IP and sock puppet ID's you can also see in the slide show (slide #31). Here's one the Twit-troll Twitted referencing an email I sent asking her to leave me alone, literally quoting her own email response to me — she then deletes the Twits thus exploiting the system to harass and get away with it, except I screencap every attack (as I do with Ms. Ninapedia). The full MP3 is forthcoming for that talk as well; I'll post it soon.

Especially interesting was ErosBlog's Bacchus in response to my ETech talk: Porn Versus Activism In The Troll Ecosystem.

But, it's difficult to be anonymous or private in any regard on the internet — not impossible but difficult. The anonymous blogger has to be extremely smart, tech savvy and never make a mistake in trust or tech — many panelists concurred that it's just not possible. (I still think it is, but I'm also an out, highly visible blogger so my opinion is different.) The bottom line seems to be that if someone wants to find out who you really are, they can, and will. The main points I wanted to drive home was twofold: one, that I think keeping trolls, stalkers, sexual harassers and individual sexual privacy contained are all platform solvable issues. Meaning, that if, say, a social networking site is built, it should accept (and not deny/decry/punish) the human urge to use it for sex play — and that all community managers should have some sort of IRL experience with being stalked.

The other point I wanted to really stress is that just because we take sexual risks online, does not mean we don't deserve equal treatment. We do: and interestingly, I've noticed that the tech worlds, and especially the SXSW crowd is much more tolerant and sex-positive than mainstream media and other tech conventions I've been to.

Lastly, I'm honored to have our panel mentioned with big props in what I think is the BEST, most thoughtful SXSWi wrapup post I've seen yet: jbrotherloves' SXSW 08 WrapUp. And — yay! — I got a mention on one of my favorite sites, Ars Technica! Thank you both!

General SXSWi update: there's a nice post of pics from the Gawker Media party (perhaps the funnest one) here at bub.blicio.us. Yay! Also check this fucking awesome Team Fleshbot photo from the same party, an adorable image of me and my squeeze here, and Scott Beale's pic of me and Jonathan Moore in his Gawker Party Set is dorkalicious...

comments \(5\)

:: dreaming of margaret cho, livestreaming, saturday hijinks 14.03.2008

Image of Margaret Cho via mousebrat2006.

Every time I walk across my apartment today I skip, skip, skip! Ever since Margaret Cho emailed me yesterday and asked if I was coming to see her Beautiful show at the Warfield saturday night! Yes, and yesyesyes! As many readers know, I heart Cho (and not just because we have matching tattoos and I got to interview her for the Chron, among other outlets). She is just as cool as you'd hope she'd be, but even more times a billion. So I think I've secured a date for saturday and am going to the late show.

The plan is to see Margaret, too — not just onstage, but to also bear witness to the backstage chaos. I'm armed with my B-cups, fabulous lashes, big hugs and smooches for MCho, and a couple gadgets for fun. I'll be taking along the Nokia N-95 that Justin.tv and Qik let me run off with, so I'll try to livestream some of the activity. Livestreaming with the Nokia has been frustrating: the camera keeps crashing, my gorgeous Justin.tv page isn't hooked into the camera's feed yet so you have to watch my Qik page (or grab its RSS, which is the URL) or follow me on Twitter to get an instant notification when I go live wherever I am and whatever I'm doing. It's also very dependent on getting a good signal: I've had several great videos (like this one from the Monochrom Guerrilla tech transgression presentation Q and A) wind up very choppy because of the building's signal interference.

So it's a crapshoot, sometimes literally. I'll think I'm getting a good long funny video when I got nothing at all. Or I'll get a fun couple minutes of hilarious WTF-ness. After, I try and comb back through what actually uploaded to Qik and I'll title videos I think people will want to see. Like my few precious post-panel, post-BBC interview minutes with sweetie Girl With A One Track Mind, UK Guardian author and outed sex blogger Zoe Margolis. Abruptly at the end, the Nokia lost signal.

Qik has emailed me suggesting that I reduce the quality of the video I'm streaming, but I wish I didn't have to in order to get reliability. Still, on Saturday night I'll stream what I can of my adventures, and do my usual photo and video after-wrap. It's all fun with new tools, and I think they'll only get better... Hope you don't mind the spontaneity, bizarre moments and occasional disappointment. Also, contrary to the chat windows, I can't text/chat while filming, it's not qwerty or even remotely easy with the Nokia while filming.

comments \(4\)

:: a sweet nudeinsf surprise 14.03.2008

You might think that I know the peeps at Nude in SF, or that I'm an affiliate but no and no — I just love that they're unleashing gaggles of pretty nekkid girls on the streets of my beautiful wonderful city (San Francisco) and photographing the results, giving me two things I love in one sweet package. And they have nice freebies on their update page (I'm cheap/broke, etc.) plus I'm a sucker for interactive maps. But one of the webmasters just emailed me excitedly about their newest update, a shoot with model Samora in the Forest Hill neighborhood that didn't go quite as planned:

Violet - something amazing happened during the last set of pictures. A husband and wife were driving by, and the husband jumped out with his camera, and the woman took her clothes off and joined in! It was really quite amazing, something I imagine could only happen with the lovely people of San Francisco.

comment \(1\)

:: lovehoney's superb cocksucking customer care 14.03.2008

They just emailed me with this great post — a great example of dealing with hostile emailers. Love this snip:

(...) Do let me know if you have any more questions about our fucking list and I'll be happy to help when I've stopped sucking cock.

All the best,
Richard
LoveHoney Customer Care

Put a morning smile on my face, no small task.

no comments →

:: internet celebrity interview on Pop17 13.03.2008

Image by kk+.

While walking the halls in the Austin Convention Center with hottie Jonathan Moore during SXSW, I was stopped by Sarah Meyers and she asked me for a quick interview — which ended up in this nice little video for her new project Pop17. In the vid, she asks a number of videoblog personalities about the concept of web celebrity. She gets some very interesting answers. I'm at the end (which is nice), and Jonathan ran the camera. Ironically, the next day I ran into several friends at a bar (no, that's not the ironic part) and they told me that the interview I did with Meyers was used by a local Austin TV news station as background B-roll for their SXSW coverage. "Hey! I saw you on TV last night in the hotel room!" was repeated over drinks, and felt surreal... (Also, I didn't know this image was being snapped, or by who...)

Here is the link to the Pop17 episode — I'd embed the video but I'm worried it'll break my blog — WordPress isn't playing nice with video embeds right now, grrr...

comments \(7\)

← Previous Entries

violet blue™ :: open source sex Entries and Comments.

this website and all pertaining work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs2.5 License